Today, I want to share with you a cute little poem (down below) about a broken teapot. My pastor's wife (Mrs. Kathy McCullough) wrote this poem, and last year she placed it on pretty bookmarks to give to the ladies at our church. I keep mine at my bedside since that's where I love to read. I love teacups and teapots as well.

Broken Cup by Margaret Gibson - Goodreads

My mug is broken, my heart is sad! What woes can fate still hold in store! The friend I cherished a thousand days Is smashed to pieces on the floor! Is shattered and to Limbo gone, I'll see my Mug no more! Relic it was of joyous hours Whose golden memories still allure--When coffee made of rye we drank, And gray was all the dress we wore!
