Life From Our Land. Agrarianism Marcus Grodi. Oct 10. Written By Marcus Grodi. It was a great honor and humble surprise to be asked by His eminence Dale Ahlquist to speak as a part of this illustrious panel, on of all things agrarian distributism. For me to do this square on would truly be a clear example of the Peter Principle, for being by far the worst farmer who ever lived and mostly inept in economics, I would certainly be rising to the level of my incompetence.

Life From Our Land — The Distributist Review

As Marcus states in the article, his goal in writing Life from Our Land: The Search for a Simpler Life in a Complex World, was to “help at least a few more to find their way through the narrow gate.” That, of course, is a goal we wholeheartedly support!

"Our Land, Our Life"

He married Margaret, and together they began a life of working the land—what would soon be their land. Under the Homestead Act of 1862, they had to live on the land for five continuous years, build a structure, and improve the land. If they did this, and paid a $15 filing fee, the land became theirs.
