Neil Young is absolutely right about the analog vs digital experience. I'm so glad to have this record and other NY albums. I've always liked a few songs, but I just recently got into Neil Young after reading his manager, Elliot Robert's, comments following the news of Universal hiding the destruction of original analog masters of so many important works.

Rolling Stone ranked "Harvest Moon" as the #37 all time Neil Young song. Allmusic 's Matthew Greenwald strongly praised the song, stating that the song epitomized the album and "the power of nature and music, as well as a feeling of celebrating lifetime love are the focal points here, and Young captures it all in his typically literate, artless style."
